A Sharing Company Accreditation

What a day! Reading this means you might be eligible for the accreditation of being a Sharing Company.

A Sharing Company is defined as a company that shares it's (future) ownership with employees (and perhaps other stakeholders), in order to share the economic profits and potentially legal rights to the company. A fair share for everyone.

The accreditation

Who is this for?

This accreditation really is for any company sharing it's (future) ownership with employees (and perhaps other stakeholders), in order to share the economic profits and potentially legal rights to the company.

How do I get the accreditation?

There is an assessment in order to reach the accreditation (on either level). This Accreditation is executed and registered by Share Council and The Share Foundation. The assessment consists of a check on the participation form(s) and on the legal rights and obligations of the participants.

٥

Why does Share Council do this?

The mission of Share Council is to close the capital wealth gap in Europe by assuring that all 137 million SME employees own the company to work for. This accreditation is meant to support any company in their work to contribute to this big hairy audacious goal. Only together we can do this.

Is it only for Share Council platform users?

No, truly any company can apply for the accreditation. The companies listed on the Share Council platform have the advantage that the assessment is easier to perform.
